"THE UNHEARD STORIES OF THE COLLEGE GALLERY"

I am the cherished space where the younger generation of this society craft lifelong memories during their late teens and early twenties, as they embark on their academic journey through college.

On regular college days, I am the buzzy epicenter where they spend their break time, engaging in conversations and sharing meals with their friends. During festive times such as Pongal, Traditional Day, Farewell, and the last day of college, I become the place where they celebrate by capture the essence of their college life, taking group pictures that become cherished mementos of their time here.

I am the silent witness, welcoming them as they enter the college gates and bidding them farewell during their graduation, preserving the emotions and transformations that occur during their journey. I have seen them laugh, cry, and confide in me, sharing their deepest secrets and stories. Yet, though I have no voice, I hold a treasure of their memories.

Every soul that graces this campus creates a connection with me, leaving behind their own unique memory. For now, I remain inaccessible, as the graduates of previous year yearn to relive their moments with me, while the new batch has yet to savor the nostalgia.

Even I long to be there for them, as I feel the weight of the years in the form of subtle cracks. Yes, I am growing old too, just like the cherished memories that reside within me.

Have you figured out who I am now?

Yes, I am your trusted friend, the college gallery.

Henna application has not only been a mere hobby but a genuine passion and an integral part of Fouzia's life. Fouzia has been engaged in henna application since the age of 12, without the intention of pursuing it professionally. Over time, as she explored the work of other henna artists, the idea of trying her hand in henna business began to take shape. Her growing confidence in her abilities to create intricate designs fueled the ambition to start her own enterprise.

Fouzia actively accepts henna orders for various occasions, including bridal henna, which often involves extensive, time-consuming efforts of up to 7-8 hours. Her passion for this art remains unwavering, and she's determined to keep pursuing it.

Her engaging content in YouTube and Instagram has garnered followers from various countries, even though her primary focus is not on generating substantial income but on the sense of inner peace and satisfaction it brings. Juggling the demands of managing her henna business and pursuing her studies has been a challenging endeavor for Fouzia. She views this opportunity as a platform to connect with a wider audience and expand her business. The department is very happy to recognize the budding entrepreneur.
